To Whom It May Concern:

I have had the opportunity of working with Kevin Deck for the past ten years. First, as part of the Virtual High School Consortium, a program of the National Technology Challenge Grant and then as part of the eHigh School program, an online initiative of the Cobb County School District.

In 1998, Kevin applied to create an online mathematics course for the Virtual High School Consortium, Math You Can Use in College. This course is still being taught today as part of the Virtual High School (VHS, Inc.). In 2001 the school district decided to create its own virtual program. Kevin was part of a team of developers who created Algebra II and then was the sole developer of Algebra III. He has been the year-round instructor for this course ever since.

Kevin has a keen understanding of the online environment and his role as a facilitator of learning and as such, provides many opportunities for engagement by using student-centered and performance-based activities. He provides a positive environment in which students are encouraged to be actively engaged in the learning process.

Kevin has proven that good teaching can be done in the virtual environment and has collaborated with peers and acted as a mentor to new teachers to enhance the instructional environment of eHigh School. He has shared his expertise with others to encourage quality online delivery in other curriculum areas. He is a valued member of the online learning community of the Cobb County School District.

I highly recommend him for your school. He would be an asset to your learning community.

Sincerely,

Becky Nunnally
Supervisor, eHigh School
